Skegness Burgh le Marsh - Wainfleet

Walk 7

Lincolnshire
COUNTY COUNCIL

Introduction

This linear walk links Skegness and Wainfleet railway stations on the east coast of Lincolnshire.

Skegness is the County's most famous seaside resort and the home of the first Butlins holiday camp and the Jolly Fisherman. Prior to the arrival of the railway in Skegness in 1873 it was a village with less than 400 residents. The town expanded during the 20th century and is still a popular holiday destination.

Now 8km (5 miles) from the sea, Wainfleet once stood on the coast and was an important port until it became silted up in the 15th century. The town has many attractive buildings including a terrace of grand houses that would not look out of place in London. This walk links the two towns via another, Burgh le Marsh.

Around Burgh and Croft are areas of Lincolnshire Coastal Grazing Marsh, a nationally threatened habitat that supports a rich variety of wildlife including otters, water voles and dragonflies as well as birds such as lapwing, snipe, redshank and curlew. Areas of pasture you see on this walk might have avoided the plough for 200 years. The Lincolnshire Coastal Grazing Marshes Project began in 2011 to protect the remaining grassland and encourage pastoral farming.
